inspired by minimal art/Japan's various seasons.

Feel Japan's various seasons through a calendar

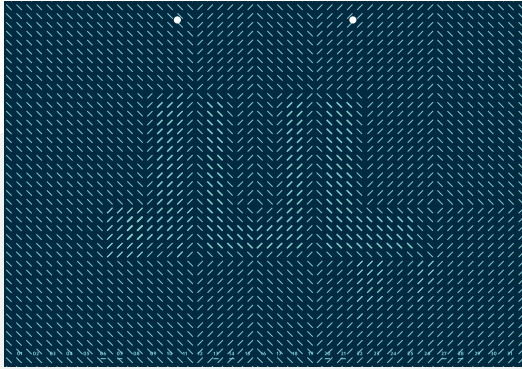

Japanese Graphic Designer, Nozomi Akutsu, has created an original calendar inspired by her home country Japan's various seasons.

It's a part of the interior of your house

The calendar shows each month through an image. This is not suitable for someone who wants to make notes, this is for someone who is particular about their interior design

July

Japan gets hotter from July. The mirage that floats above asphalt is a summer feature of Japan.

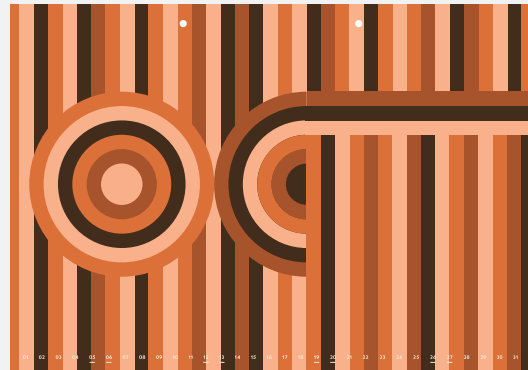

August

The summer in Japan includes blue, but it's hot enough to forget that. The dark blue waves are an image of the brilliant Japanese sea under the hot sun.

September

September is also the typhoon season. It is the season when you feel the end of summer with rain.

October

Fresh green autumn begins. October is a busy season with many events, such as athletic meetings, readings, barbecues and weddings.

November

It is the season when the dead leaves are coloured, the dead leaves fall, and you feel the coming of winter. The November graphic has branches as a motif.

December

It may look like snow for a moment, but this is an image of a city at night. Japan does not sleep, even in winter. There are a lot of buildings and street lamps.
